Lots of pressure in these classes

BY HANNELORE VOLPE
Staff Writer

If you always wanted to start cooking healthy foods while spending less time in the kitchen, you can learn how at classes using the newest generation of pressure cookers.

Since the cooking time is shorter with pressure cookers, you can also save on energy bills.

Classes start March 28 at The Healing Force wellness store in downtown Stouffville.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Blaize Monostory, who has more than 40 years' experience preparing food with pressure cookers and is an energy efficiency advisor, will show you how to prepare everything from breakfast to desserts to using a pressure cooker for camping or at the cottage.

The first session, either March 28 from 7 to 9 p.m. or March 29 from 1 to 3 p.m., covers safety and other features and is a pre-requisite for the other classes.

Six more sessions follow during April, May and June. A complete schedule is available at The Healing Force, 6333 Main St., where classes are being held. Cost is $30 per class.

To register, call 905-642-8643.
