

Buy daffodils, fight cancer, society says

BY HANNELORE VOLPE
Staff Writer

The cheerful yellow flowers popping up around town tomorrow and Saturday have a serious message: you have cancer-fighting powers.

You can put those powers into action by supporting the Daffodil Days campaign or by canvassing your neighbourhood next month.

Volunteers will sell the blooms tomorrow at the Stouffville train station during the evening rush hour, as well as the liquor store at 5710 Main St.

You'll have a chance to help fund cancer research by purchasing fresh bunches of daffodils from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, as well.

Volunteers will be at the liquor store, Shoppers Drug Mart, Nofrills, A&P, Canadian Tire, Giant Tiger, The Lebovic Leisure Centre, Sobeys and Wal-Mart.

Flower sales kick off the month-long, door-to-door campaign, which this year has about 380 volunteers in Stouffville and Markham.

More volunteers are needed, however, because of new homes rapidly being occupied in Stouffville.

The Canadian Cancer Society is urging you to donate as little as three hours for canvassing. Each route consists of about 20 homes.

The goal for this year's daffodil campaign, in both municipalities, is $48,000, said Carol-May McQuillan, volunteer development specialist for the society.

This year's captain for Whitchurch-Stouffville is Janet Campbell.

Relay for Life shooting for 30 teams in this year's event

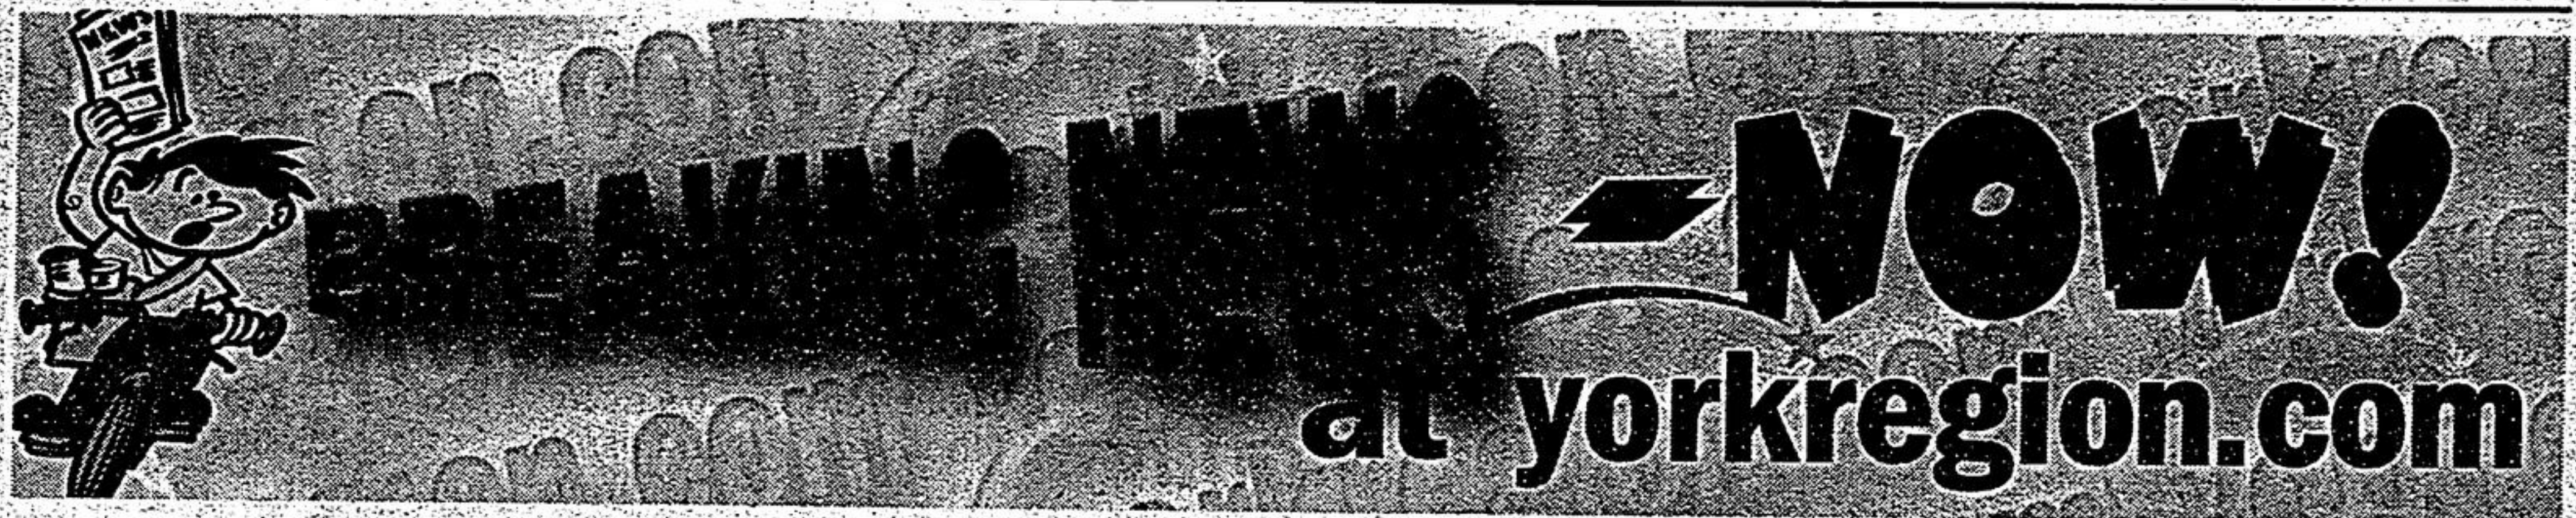

Stouffville's first annual Relay for Life has already met its original modest target of 15 teams and is now looking for 15 more.

The event promises "a range of emotions packed into one day", said Carol-May McQuillan, the cancer society's volunteer development specialist.

The relay begins June 15 at 7 p.m. and goes until 7 the next morning on the Willowgrove grounds at 11737 McCowan Rd.

Survivors begin the event with the Victory Lap. Later, team members walk or run around the track. At 10 p.m. luminary candles in honour or memory of those with cancer are placed around the track.
