Women's institute tackles rural issues

Hillary, died recently at 92. The group is a non-profit organization that helps local women and their families by offering education and support programs as well as improving the status of women.

"We not only help our own community but women all over the world," said Mrs. Richardson, who has been a member since 1967. "I'm a strong believer in the women's institute because it's worldwide."

The organization's Rural Ontario Sharing Education works in the rural community to provide access to information, help with social issues and increase awareness of rural issues and concerns. The group also seeks to educate women who may not have access to resources.

"It's a wonderful organization for women to participate," said Anja Karppa of the Vandorf branch. "It's wonderful to be part of meeting new people."

Anyone interested in joining the group can visit the Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario web site at fwio.on.ca

FIGHT OVER 100 DISEASES WITH ONE DONATION
 These are just a few of the over 100 liver-related illnesses that threaten the lives of more than 2 million Canadian men, women and children. For 25 years now, the Canadian Liver Foundation has been leading the fight against liver disease and to continue, we need your help. One simple act of kindness can go so very far.
