JUST ASK

MARY FRANCES TURNER

We took your questions about public transit to Mary Frances Turner, president of York Region Rapid Transit. To read more questions and answers go to yorkregion.com

Q: I had been waiting eagerly for the introduction of the VIVA line. I live on Tomlinson Circle in Markham. For me the nearest VIVA stop is a walk of 1.5 kilometers and in the cold it is impossible.

I know buses cannot reach the inner arteries of the town. But can we start some sort of a van service that could pick up a few passengers instead of the big bus that runs empty all the time and at erratic times.

It would be better if we had a few vans running and these drivers need not be as expensive, as they are driving just a car or a van.

Just as we get some volunteers for handicapped driving we should be able to get some for close to the minimum wage.

RAVI PRATHIVATHI
MARKHAM

A. This is an important question about building the right connections between services.

Viva and YRT are two services that operate as one system with a single fare.

Viva is designed to provide a high-frequency, rapid transit backbone linking developing urban centres in Markham, Richmond Hill, Vaughan and Newmarket to each other and to neighbouring municipalities, GO Transit and the TTC.

YRT services connect neighbourhoods to each other, to local amenities and to the rapid transit backbone.

YRT is exploring a small bus strategy that might be a model for service delivery in areas such as yours.
