DRIVING HOME A POINT

If you drive a motorcycle, you may want to include earplugs along with your helmet as another piece of safety. engines, machinery, and loud music. According to a recent informal study of 33 motorcycles, wear certain clothing and a helmet to audiologists found that nearly half protect yourself. It's also important to of them produced sounds over 100 decibels when throttled up. That is the equivalent of a loud rock concert or a chainsaw. This noise level may not be representative of all makes and models, but it does point out the potential dangers posed by bikes with modified exhaust systems that are designed to make noise. Exposure to noise at 100 decibels is safe for only fifteen minutes. Permanent hearing loss can result from prolonged exposure to levels of 85 decibels and higher.
