White, Hammond kick off Stouffville house concerts

NANCY WHITE

Stouffville may not have a theatre, but it has another music series. And no theatre is required.

A self-described "little band of folksingers, songwriters and musicians and fans" has launched a series of house concert performances, said spokesperson Lori Jury.

The shows take place in members' homes.

That means only 30 tickets are available for the first show, Nov. 25, featuring CBC favourite Nancy White and Stouffville's own Marie-Lynn Hammond, ex of Stringband.

Ms. White, "Canada's queen of the topical song", is best known for her work on CBC radio.

"The beauty of the concept is that the audience gets an up-close and personal experience in a warm, informal setting and can meet and chat with the performers," Ms Jury said.

"This amazing event is truly one of a kind and happening in Stouffville, where folks are real.

Tickets for the afternoon show are $15. Refreshments will be served at intermission and after the concert.

Other shows will be announced.

To buy tickets or host a show, call 905-640-1920.
