GLAMOROUS "SQUAW"

Talented young singers and dancers chosen from all parts of Canada, are busy rehearsing for the Canadian National Exhibition grandstand show to be held in Toronto Aug. 24 to Sept. 8. Vikki Vanvik, above, of Vancouver, B.C., has already received her complete costume for her part as Indian dancer in the production.

Chickens with 'Glasses' Hardier, Produce More

Take Louis J. Harwood's word for it, there's nothing that keeps a chicken healthier or more productive than a pair of pince nez spectacles. He says they are the biggest boon to the poultry business since creation of the egg.

He makes them himself—plastic gadgets called "spectroons." They come in a variety of shades but the red, or rose-colored, are considered by some as the best.

Relieves the chicken of its frustrations, perhaps, and keeps the bird mindful of the business at hand.

Harwood, who owns a chicken ranch at Farmingdale, N.J., is attending the 35th annual American Poultry Hatchery convention. On display he has two leghorn hens wearing his "eyeglasses."

Harwood says the real purpose of the spectacles is to eliminate "cannibalism," one of poultrymen's biggest headaches. When not laying eggs, chickens like to peck at each other.

When blood is drawn, the whole flock descends on the victim and pecks it to death. The plastic glasses clamp on the chicken's nose. Once on, they are worn for life.

They permit the bird to see sideways and downward but not straight ahead.

New Ontario County Home To Lack Nothing For Comfort

When the new Ontario County Home now under construction is completed some time this fall, it will be ultra modern and one of the finest not only in Ontario but the Dominion. Rapid progress has been made on the structure costing over $800,000 during the past few weeks, and while no definite date has been set for the official opening, it is expected to be in September or October. The tentative date given by the contractors some time ago was September 15th. Furnishings have been purchased and will be ready to put in place when the building is completed.

The new Ontario County Home for the Aged was designed to provide the maximum accommodation as economically as possible, consistent with the use of durable materials. The project accommodates approximately 194 aged persons. The design recognizes that there are various stages and conditions in elderly people. For this reason, there is a 47-bed bedridden wing which accommodates 47 persons, approximately 31 men and 16 women. For people who are very self-reliant and active, there are men and women's wings which accommodate 50 elderly men and 14 women. For those who need special care because of slight physical or other infirmities, there is a north wing which takes care of 44 men and 35 women. The plan also provides for rooms for invalid couples.

Because some of these people will require special care, especially those in the bedridden wing, staff quarters are necessary, and in addition to a suite for the superintendent, there is accommodation for three senior assistants, six female helpers, and two male attendants to live in the building. It is anticipated that a proportion of the help will come only to work by the day, and provision has been made for eight male and eight female outside workers. These workers can leave their outdoor clothes in a locker room, and change into their uniforms for their institutional work. In conjunction with the locker rooms, there are facilities for showers, basins, etc.

The building is designed so that all residents are accommodated on one floor. The architects' reasons for this design were that numerous elderly people have hurt themselves on staircases, and the multi-floor unit would necessitate heavier foundation construction and elevators.

The central portion of the building contains the administrative block, consisting of the superintendent's office, board room and visitors' room.

There is a main dining room which will seat about one hundred and fifty persons, adjoining a modern kitchen. The dining room is used by men and women who need no special care. The staff have a separate dining room adjoining the kitchen. The kitchen is complete with refrigeration boxes for meat, dairy and vegetable supplies. There is an electrically operated hoist to bring food from the kitchen storage in the basement. Electrically heated food trucks take food to bed patients and patients needing special care who cannot come to the main dining room. There is a dishwasher, potato peeler, steam table, automatic slicer, and other modern conveniences in the kitchen.

Above the kitchen are female staff quarters.

The wings which accommodate people who need no special care and people who need partial attention have bedrooms which hold one, two, and four beds each. Each resident has his own locker in a locker room. The bedrooms will all have individual bedside tables and storage cupboards for each resident's personal effects. Each room has an automatic fire alarm signal system. There are sitting rooms and visitors' rooms in the various wings.

Sewing space and a barber shop have been included.

The bedridden wing will hold 47 hospital-type beds in private, semi-private and four-bed wards. There is a floor pantry for serving food, and a workroom for the attendants in this wing. Bed patients have also lockers for personal effects. The bathroom in this wing is equipped with a bathing slab, so that a stretcher can be wheeled beside the slab and the patient moved and bathed properly.

There is a nurses' room and an examination room for the visiting physician.

It is supposed that some people in the bedridden wing will be able to get up from time to time and a day room has been provided for them on their sitting-up days.

In the basement there are numerous storage areas for kitchen stores, maintenance stores, and recreation. The building will also have a hobby room where simple crafts can be followed.

Adjoining the main building is a boiler room and laundry. The laundry is modern and complete in every respect and is designed to accommodate additional equipment, should the building ever be extended. The plan of the building was made so that the accommodation can be raised to take care of upwards of 250 people. In each room there is forced ventilation.

The bedrooms are being furnished with enamelled steel beds which are being built at a special height so that old people will have no difficulty in getting in and out.

The special building committee is choosing attractive curtains for all the rooms. The colour scheme has been laid out so that there are various room colours with matching or complementary linoleum floors. Generally speaking, the floors in the bedrooms are linoleum and the corridor and bathroom floors are terrazzo. All the windows are double glazed, and weatherstripped.

The heating system includes three stoker fed boilers, coal handling equipment, and convactor type radiators in all the rooms.

It is intended that the grounds will be attractively landscaped with areas where the elderly people may sit outside. The building has a number of open covered porches for those who wish to sit out in rainy weather or during the evening.
