What makes A House Sell Fast?

Reg Taylor

It is a time-honored axiom in the real estate profession that "there is a buyer for every house" — a fact that presently becomes apparent to anyone engaged for any length of time in marketing home properties.

Why, then, are some houses a problem to sell, remaining on the market for many months while others sell readily? If there is a buyer for every house then what happened to the buyers of these houses?

The explanation usually lies with the fact that they were improperly listed. A misjudgment may later be corrected, of course, but then the best prospects have come and gone and valuable time has been lost.

The three basic points of every listing are the proper price, terms and conditions; most selling problems originate from mistakes on these points.

A fair price is foremost based on the type of house, location and condition. If a fair price is first established, then the terms and conditions should be tailored for the house's usual type of buyer.

An accurate listing can be obtained only from an appraisal by a seasoned Realtor. If the job is done correctly the first time around, the seller will be time and money ahead.
