New dog control bylaw Compulsory vaccination scrapped by council

STOUFFVILLE — The recommendation that anti-rabies vaccination certificates should precede the sale of all dog licences, created controversy within Town Council, Nov. 23-so much so, that the suggestion was eventually scrapped. The debate occurred during second reading of a new Dog-Control Bylaw, effective in 1972.

Mayor Ken Laushway said that while the basic idea seemed sound, to make such a requirement compulsory could create considerable hard feeling.

But councillor Betty van Nostrand was not that sympathetic. She assailed the 'irresponsible people who fail to take proper care of their pets.

Going still further, the Mayor noted that such a provision could place the Town Staff in a bad light and make them subject to considerable abuse.

While Mayor Laushway's motion to delete the clause entirely was defeated, an amendment by councillor Merlyn Baker that it become effective Jan. 1, 1973, was approved.

Council also approved the fee schedule.

Rates for one male dog will be $3 and $6 for each additional male. One female will cost $5 and $10 for each additional. Councillor Tom Lonergan recommended that a 'spayed female' be charged at the same rate as a male.

"You'd have to have a certificate from a veterinarian", pointed out Mayor Laushway, "who knows if she's been spayed or not?"

"She does", observed councillor Herb Simpson.

Council agreed to withhold third reading until the Bylaw could be presented in a proper form. It will also be submitted to Town solicitor Paul Mingay for a legal opinion.

'Hard' water

STOUFFVILLE — The interior of Mrs. Don Huxtable's water softener was anything but 'soft'. In fact, a service report from the Culligan Co., described the inside as plugged "with the worst junk I have ever seen".

Mrs. Huxtable, Fairview Avenue, Stouffville, is asking the Town to pay the bill, attributing the problem to the local water system. Her complaint, in the form of a letter, was considered by Council, Nov. 23.

"There are lots of these units around", observed Mayor Ken Laushway, "I can't understand why this particular one would get plugged".

The matter has been referred to the Works Committee for a report.
