Valentine's Day

It's time to pop the big question!

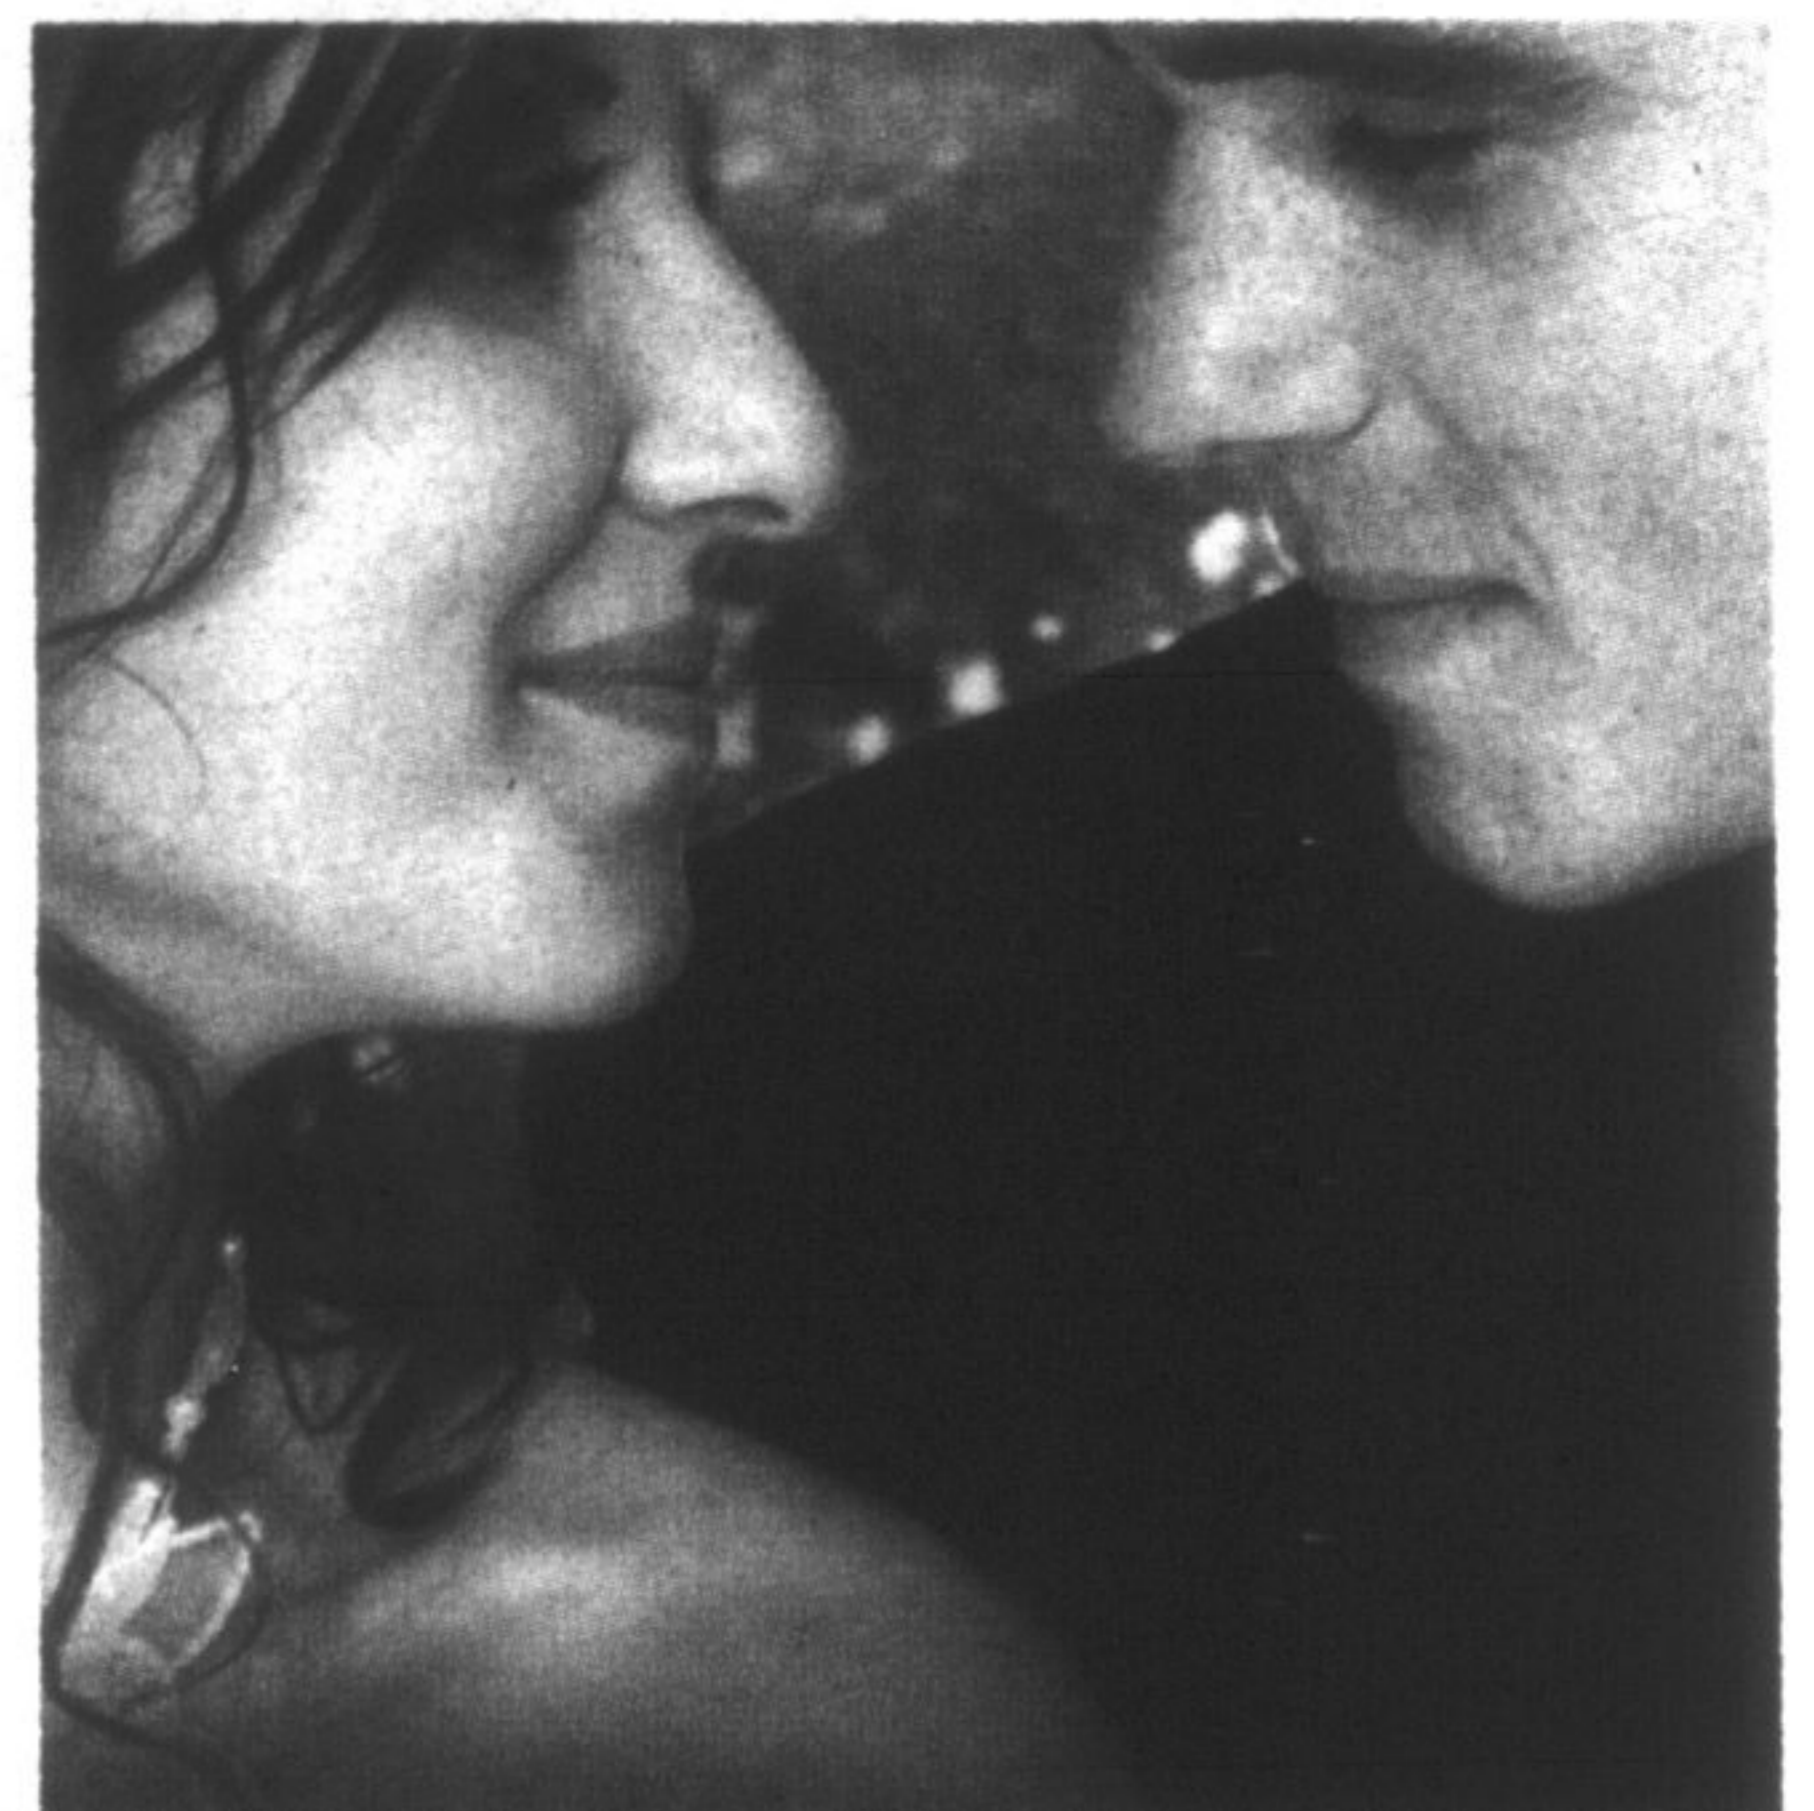

Some people think about it for days before they actually launch into it; others pop the question on the spur of the moment. When the time comes for the big proposal, there are no set rules, but love is certainly part of it! Valentine's Day, the special day for lovers, is a wonderful time to ask the question that will change your life! You can choose a very simple proposal by inviting your loved one to a romantic stroll under the moonlight, but why not reflect on this special event and plan a more original scenario? After all, this moment will only happen once.

Ideas, there are hundreds! Some businesses will even organize a spectacular out-of-the-ordinary staging for your marriage proposal. Fortunately, there are also many suggestions for those who want to impress their partner without spending a fortune.

For example, you can ask a friend to serve a special meal in your home. Transform your livingroom into a grand restaurant and take the time to enjoy the conversation. This very romantic candle-lit supper will surely produce the desired effect. How about music to set the stage for your big declaration? At a pre-arranged time, two modern-day minstrels dressed in a costume of your choice (perhaps some of your more extraverted friends), can surprise your partner at home, the office, or some other place that you choose. How romantic!

Another idea that can transform your marriage proposal into a memorable event is to post your declaration of love on the side of a truck! According to your plans, at the time and place you choose, your surprise message can drive past your car as you travel to a holiday destination, or it can surprise your loved one as you enjoy a romantic walk. Fresh, dynamic, and original, your surprise is sure to lead you down the road to happiness.
