not being featured on the show, you can have your say on the website, www.rogerstelevision.com/myHS.

The site is designed to allow students from across the region to share opinions on anything and everything. Students will also be able to go online and rant about issues via webcam, connecting like youth with each other.

MyHS will air every Friday at 7 p.m. The first episode ran Friday.

GREENBELT FOUNDATION ADVERTORIAL

Planting the future in Ontario's Greenbelt

Every gardener knows the importance of good planning. From selecting plants to knowing the right amount of water and sunlight, we make the best of the seasons to foster growth. We ensure that resources have time to replenish themselves and nature's balance is maintained.

For Mark Cullen, Canada's own garden expert, whose passion is the outdoors, planning something as small as a garden or as large as Ontario's Greenbelt just makes sense. "Creating a beautiful garden requires planning; so too do we need to plan rural and agricultural areas as well as cities with future generations in mind."

The Greenbelt Plan took years to develop and is now an award-winning plan for the largest and most diverse Greenbelt in the world - 1.8 million acres of protected agricultural and environmentally valuable land surrounding Ontario's Golden Horseshoe.

With Earth Day approaching on April 22, we appreciate how even our gardens contribute to our clean air, water and earth.

Composting, conserving water and encouraging beneficial wildlife are a few ways to keep your backyard 'green.'

"It's about green space and taking pride in what the land has to offer. From farming to gardening, we're all planting seeds and doing our part to keep Ontario's Greenbelt beautiful, bountiful and vibrant," Cullen said.

It's not only fruits and flowers, but possibility that grows here.
