Hoover Park and Hwy. 48 power centre map shows location of proposed Rona store near Wal-Mart.

Service the key, Schell Lumber says

However, they soon bounce back.

Since much of the Schell Building Centres' business comes from the construction trade, and with an increasing population, there's room for both the big box and his stores, Mr. Schell said.

"Our strength is basically service," said Mr. Schell, who runs the business, including the Schell Country Depot and Design Centre, with his cousin, Steve Schell.

"We are trying to be like the old stores where we can serve you," Mr. Schell said.

Customers can come in for a few nails or screws, for instance, without having to take several dozen in a package, have custom orders done, get advice from the knowledgeable tool guys working there and receive free delivery.

Pricing is also kept in line with competing hardware and building stores, he said.

The country depot caters to local farmers, while the design centre carries a full complement of flooring, windows, doors and more.

"There are still a lot of farmers and hobby farmers around," Mr. Schell said.

Calls to RONA's Ontario office were not returned.

Four more eateries served up at Wal-Mart centre

More restaurants coming to Hoover Park Town Centre within year:

RONA isn't the only store coming within the next year.

More buildings are already going up and shoppers will eventually have more restaurants to choose from, such as Thai Villa, Sgt. Peppers's Pub and Grill, Subway and Fulton Burger.

Canadian Tire, Mark's Work Wearhouse, Tim Hortons and Boston Pizza opened a few months ago.
