Entrust your roof to a professional roofer

Whether it involves installing a new roof covering, insulating or repairing a roof, entrust your work to a specialist. The roofer installs, repairs and insulates roofs. The coverings could include tar paper, hot asphalt and gravel, liquid elastomer and thermoplastic membranes, as well as different types of shingles.

After having erected scaffolding in order to ensure security while working on the roof, the roofer will, in a manner of speaking, complete the work of the carpenter. He ensures that the coverings are well installed in order to guarantee water tightness and resistance to the elements, such as rain, snow, hail, wind and sun.

This worker is also called on to do insulation work by installing, for example, a vapour barrier, as well as water proofing basements, foundations and terraces. His training has allowed him to acquire knowledge of the application of mathematical notions as well as the properties of products and materials. He is able to estimate costs of materials and to supply estimates.

To do his work well, the roofer must be meticulous, have a good sense of organization, good manual dexterity, good enough physical shape to be able to carry heavy objects and be able to adapt to changes in temperature. He must also like working in a team and, obviously, not be afraid of heights.

Although he can have his own business, the roofer is generally in the employ of roofing or building contractors. He works both in the residential and commercial sectors.

all ceiling fans on SALE

It's easy being green!

Ceiling fans add beauty and comfort to your home – but that's not all. They also lower your energy bills. In summer, you can cut air conditioning costs by up to 40%... but your savings aren't limited to warm weather months. In winter, reduce heating costs up to 10% by circulating warm air near the ceiling back down into living spaces – especially in rooms with high or vaulted ceilings. Now that's cool. Living Lighting. It's light for living.
