Stolen licence sticker leads to charge

A 24-year-old Whitchurch-Stouffville man has been charged with possession of property obtained by crime – a licence plate sticker.

On Oct. 3, York Regional Police stopped a vehicle at Bloomington Road and Hwy. 404 for having an expired validation sticker.

Upon further investigation, the police officer discovered the vehicle was purchased in August, but failed an emissions' test.

The sticker on the vehicle was reported stolen from another vehicle in a parking lot. The driver was released on a promise to appear in court.

Police look for handheld offenders

York Regional Police is launching a campaign to get you prepared for a handheld electronic device ban that is coming into effect later this month.

Beginning Oct. 26, it will be illegal to use a handheld device while driving in Ontario.

York police are kicking off Operation Stay Focused to remind you of the new law.

During this time, if you are caught using a handheld device while driving, police will use their discretion in deciding whether or not to charge you or warn you of the new law.

This will be in effect until Feb. 1. During this three-month period, police are going to actively pursue drivers who are engaging in distract behaviour.

If you receive calls, texts or e-mails from someone who is driving, the police would like you to ask the caller to pull over before using the device.

In 2007, York Regional Police investigated 986 collisions in which driver inattention was identified as a contributing factor in the crash.

Three of these were fatal collisions and 120 resulted in injury to a driver or passenger.
