LEARNING: More schools to be added every year

Three Whitchurch-Stouffville schools to get all-day kindergarten classes

Beginning this fall, 39 schools across York Region – including three in Whitchurch-Stouffville – will welcome a full day of learning every day for four- and five-year-olds.

The province on Tuesday released a list of 600 schools that will introduce the full-day program.

Whitchurch-Stouffville schools on the list include Summitview, Glad Park and Whitchurch Highlands. They are three of 25 public schools in the region included in the program. There are 162 public elementary schools in York.

Fourteen Catholic schools in the region are on the list. None is in Whitchurch-Stouffville.

Full implementation is expected by 2016 with more schools being added each year.

The program will have about 26 students per classroom instructed by one kindergarten teacher and assisted by an early childhood educator.

"Early learning supports children in developing social, emotional, academic and physical skills," said York Region District School Board chairperson Diane Giangrande.

Parents also have the option to sign up for pre- and post-school day programming.

"By giving more children a better start on their education, we're giving them more chances to succeed," said Ontario Minister of Education Kathleen Wynne. "Investing in early learning is good for children, good for parents and good for Ontario."

School boards had until late last year to submit their tentative lists of schools for this September, with priority given to those with space – no money is being provided initially for renovations or additions – as well as those with no in-school daycares, and those in needy neighbourhoods.

Kindergarten registration in the York Region District School Board will take place after Feb. 1 for all children enrolling in kindergarten programs for September 2010.

When fully implemented for all Ontario kindergarten students, the price tag for the program – touted as unique in North America – will be $1.5 billion.
