

WELLNESS: Services still offered at Parkview Village
Aphasia centre now part of March of Dimes

The York Durham Aphasia Centre has become a program of March of Dimes Canada.

Being a program of March of Dimes will enable the centre to serve more clients and those clients will benefit by having easier access to March of Dimes programs and services for children and adults with disabilities.

This will also provide March of Dimes with the opportunity to serve more people with communication disabilities more effectively by learning from the centre's 20 years of experience, including the development of more "aphasia-friendly" programs, according to Ruth Kapelus, public relations co-ordinator for March of Dimes Canada.

As part of a large, national agency, March of Dimes will be able to provide York Durham Aphasia Centre and its consumers with needed administrative infrastructure, human resources, information technology and financial expertise, according to Ms Kapelus.

The York Durham Aphasia Centre will retain its name and office space in Stouffville's Parkview Village and continue to run programs for adults with aphasia and related communication disabilities as a program of March of Dimes Canada.
