Look up your family tree at conference

Stouffville's Ruth Burkholder will be one of more than 30 leading genealogists presenting at the Ontario Genealogical Society's Conference 2010, Canada's largest annual gathering of family-history experts.

Mrs. Burkholder will discuss how family-history enthusiasts can use Ancestry.ca, the leading online genealogy site, to build their family trees.

Her presentation is one of 60 sessions that will deliver practical advice and case studies showing genealogical research in practice. These sessions will help family-history enthusiasts at all levels of experience answer questions such as:

- Where did my family come from?
- How can I verify and fill out the sketchy traditional family history?
- How can I date my old family photos and find out who is in them?
- How do I pass along my family knowledge to future generations?

Tips and inspiring examples will help anyone start on the road to discovering their family history.

The conference takes place May 14 to 16 at the Doubletree by Hilton - Toronto Airport.
