New series offers help with money

Let's face it, most of us could use some tough love when it comes to our finances.

The recent dip in the economy has made many of us ask ourselves some tough questions.

Do I need to keep spending under control? Am I carrying too much debt? How much is enough to retire?

From mortgage woes to retirement, we could all use some help.

The York Region Media Group's Living Rich series endeavours to answer some of those questions and bring a little levity to the subject over the coming weeks and months.

We have assembled a team of financial experts who will cut through any and all of the money-related issues impacting your life.

We'd like to hear from you. If you want to be part of our Living Rich series, including being paired with a personal finance expert for advice tailored for you and your circumstances, contact assistant editor Patrick Mangion via e-mail at pmangion@yrmg.com or call 905-853-8888 ext. 271.

Anyone interested in being part of our series will have their progress tracked in a series of articles during the next few months by reporters Chris Traber, David Flesicher or Joe Fantauzzi.

Michael Smith, of Newmarket's Smith-Rogers Financial and financial planner, branch manager at Richmond Hill's Assante Wealth Management Tina Tehranchian and M & Co. Chartered Accountants Professional Corporation managing director Atul Mehra are veterans of their industries and offer a wealth of insight and information.
