Domestic violence, unit growing

With November being Women Abuse Prevention Month, York Regional Police have announced Phase 1 of their Integrated Domestic Violence Unit.

Once fully released, programs such as support, counselling, police investigators and referrals will become available in one building.

The unit will be expanded to nine officers from three who are specially trained to work with victims of domestic violence.

Investigators are available 7 a.m. to 3 a.m. from No. 1 and 3 divisions as well as 24 hours a day from general patrol officers.

Last year, York Regional Police investigated more than 5,000 criminal and non-criminal domestic-related incidents.

This number has increased from 4,685 during the corresponding period in 2008 and represents an increase of 6.7 per cent.

Of the total occurrences reported in 2009, more than 25 per cent resulted in criminal charges.
