Harambee spreads AIDS message

The Stouffville Harambee raised more than $6,300 for Give a Day to World AIDS and its partner organizations. The benefit concert with the Rouge River Connection and Albert Street Four was held at the Lebovic Centre for Arts and Entertainment - Nineteen on the Park Nov 25. "What an incredible result this is," said Dr. Jane Philpott, founder of the Give a Day movement. "What a generous and compassionate community we have here in Stouffville."

She thanked the musicians and volunteers. "Even without the donations, it was a very important evening for raising awareness and growing our sense of global solidarity. And with these donations we can see the solidarity translated into real impact to give people longer and healthier lives."

Robina Ssentongo, a visitor from Uganda, spoke at the concert about her community-based organization that is serving AIDS orphans and grandmothers burdened with the care of many children, work funded by the Stephen Lewis Foundation.
