blond shade.

Not this year.

"We left it up to the guys to pick their thing, whether it be to dye their hair or have a mullet.

"It's fine as long as they did something," he said.

Spirit head coach Craig Donovan had no objections to the eye-catching appearance, especially since the club has been on a good roll during the postseason.

NHL teams use a similar approach when the playoffs begin, only with facial hair, he said.

"Some of the guys on our team can't grow beards so they colour their hair," Donovan said. "It catches your attention for sure. But hey, I'm not complaining. So far it's working. It's a sign that we're all on the same page and committed to playing as a team."

Gunovski anticipated once the playoffs conclude the players will revert to their regular hairstyles.

"But you never know, we have a good bunch of characters on this team," he said with a laugh.
