

Sun-Tribune best in class in Ontario

You are reading the best newspaper in its class in the province.

That's according to the Ontario Community Newspapers Association, which announced its 60th annual Better Newspapers Competition award recipients during the association's spring convention in Niagara Falls last weekend.

The Stouffville Sun-Tribune was called best in its circulation class in general excellence judging.

Niagara This Week was second and the Picton Gazette third.

Judges included a publisher and editors from Alberta and Newfoundland.

"The Stouffville Sun-Tribune is simply excellent," they wrote. "Compelling photos and headlines, exceptional layout, features and photo spreads make every page enjoyable."

News stories and the paper's sports section were also praised by the competition's judges.

'The Stouffville Sun-Tribune is simply excellent.'

Founded in 1950 and based in Burlington, the OCNA is a non-profit industry association comprising more than 300 member newspapers from throughout the province.
