Dancers tackle big themes

Politics, religion, corporate culture and sports are all explored in Motus O's newest full-length production What the Heck?

The Stouffville dance company's show will challenge and illuminate our perceptions of how society literally moves as well as seek out those moments of clarity in an uncertain world.

The show runs from Sept. 29 to Oct. 1 at the Lebovic Centre for Arts and Entertainment - Nineteen on the Park at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $35 and $18 for students at www.nineteenonthepark.ca or by calling 905-640-2322.

Join our Links panel

For the past eight years, a cross-section of your neighbours has met with community leaders and staffers at The Sun-Tribune.

Here at the York Region Media Group, we officially call it Community Links. Over coffee and treats, we talk about our town. We share opinions and experiences.

Some members have written guest columns for the paper. Others have teamed up on projects.

The guest speakers can be anyone from the mayor and police chief, to the theatre manager and the service club president.

We're looking for a new panel to begin meeting next month. We're looking for a mix of residents, gender-wise as well as geographically and ethnically.

We want newcomers as well as longtime residents on board. We want people who are passionate about our town. People who want to share and learn.

If you're interested, e-mail editor Jim Mason (jmason@yrmg.com) or call him at (905-640-2612 ext. 23).
