Trio put Stouffville hockey skills to use in GTHL

BY MICHAEL HAYAKAWA

Jackson Savery, Justin Bennett and Michael Palladino had nothing against playing their minor hockey in Whitchurch-Stouffville.

Without what the 13-year-old Stouffville residents learned while nurturing their skills in the Whitchurch-Stouffville Minor Hockey Association, they definitely wouldn't be where they are right now.

For the trio, it has provided them with an opportunity to play the game at a much higher competitive level as members of the Don Mills Flyers AAA minor bantams of the Greater Toronto Hockey League.

Mark Savery, Jackson's father and assistant coach with the Stouffville Spirit junior A hockey club, noted all three Stouffville imports have played an integral role with the Flyers, who currently sport a 5-11-2 mark and are ninth out of 12 teams in the GTHL rankings.

Justin and Jackson are the top two scorers for the Flyers and Michael has played solid on defence.

Savery attributed a good portion of what success the trio have attained to the time spent two years ago when they were under the tutelage of Don Easter as members of the Clippers minor peewee A team.

During that season, the Clippers won the York-Simcoe title.

"It says a lot about the Whitchurch-Stouffville Minor Hockey Association. They're turning out some good players," Savery said. "For the three of them to get a letter to try out for the same team at the AAA level is pretty good. It's good for Stouffville. And the kids are proud they came through the system. They were taught well and the coaches they had pushed them hard."

'For the three of them to get a letter to try out for the same team at the AAA level is pretty good.'

In electing to leave Whitchurch-Stouffville, Savery said it was strictly for competitive reasons.

"We just said, 'Hey, we'll try it,'" recalled Savery. "The kids went for a skate (with their respective GTHL teams) and that's how it worked out. It wasn't a desire to leave Stouffville, it just kind of worked out that way."

Last season, the trio split up with Jackson and Justin playing with the Toronto Titans while Michael was with the Markham Majors.

But prior to the start of this season, the three youngsters reunited when the Flyers liked what they saw and made a recruiting pitch to have them come on board.
