GOVERNMENT: New hydrants will improve service

Markham fire agreement wouldn't help Gormley

BY SANDRA BOLAN
sbolan@yrmg.com

Whitchurch-Stouffville Fire and Emergency Services personnel thought a new Markham fire station would be an asset to residents of the Gormley area.

But upon further investigation, despite being 2.5 kilometres closer than station 5-1 in Stouffville, "it is not the improved first-response time originally anticipated and is different from what was experienced in the (Central York Fire Services) situation," wrote fire chief Rob McKenzie, in a report to council last week.

Whitchurch-Stouffville will not enter into an agreement with Markham, he said.

It takes about eight to nine minutes for Whitchurch-Stouffville fire to respond to incidents in Gormley, which is about 10 km away from the 5-1 station on Weldon Road, according to the report.

Although Markham's station, at Woodbine Avenue and Major Mackenzie Road, is about 7.5 km away from Gormley, response time is about seven to eight minutes, according to Mr. McKenzie's report.

Whitchurch-Stouffville fire entered into a fire protection agreement with Central York, which is based in Newmarket and Aurora, in 2006 to help provide first-response protection to the northwest area of Whitchurch-Stouffville.

"Contracting of fire protection coverage from adjoining municipal fire departments is frequently an effective means of providing first response protection in outlying areas of a municipality and is common practice across Ontario," Mr. McKenzie wrote.

Two of the Central York stations are within

2 km of the town's northwest boundary and response times can be as low as three to four minutes, depending on the location, according to the report.

"The CYFS apparatus generally arrive on scene in Whitchurch-Stouffville four to five minutes prior to the Town of Whitchurch-Stouffville apparatus," he wrote.

Whitchurch-Stouffville fire entered into a fire protection agreement with Central York, which is based in Newmarket and Aurora, in 2006 to help provide first-response protection to the northwest area of Whitchurch-Stouffville.

Although Whitchurch-Stouffville did not enter into agreement with Markham, it does not mean Gormley residents are without protection, it just remains the same, Mr. McKenzie told The Sun-Tribune.

However, the development of a new, although limited, pressurized water system within Gormley's industrial area is expected to be fully operational by the end of this year, according to the report.

"(This) will provide responders with limited pressurized water availability e.g. from hydrants, in this area to initiate fire suppression. This resource is not available in the northwest area of (Whitchurch-Stouffville)," Mr. McKenzie wrote.

Liona Boyd offers reward for stool

The classical guitarist also left a beautifully carved, wooden guitar footstool at the Whitchurch-Stouffville golf community's recreation centre. Ms Boyd bought the piece at an antique shop in Italy.

"We have searched high and low, but no one at the venue has seen it," her manager, Jimmy Prevost, told The Stouffville Sun-Tribune. "She is devastated to have lost it and is offering a $100 reward for its return."

"Liona, with her usual positive outlook, has faith that some nice person will return it."

If you have seen the stool, call Curtain Call Entertainment at 519-893-4330.
