Allegra Marketing Print Design in Stouffville has been awarded Allegra Marketing Central certification. The program includes advanced training in marketing planning, database management and the development and execution of cross-media tactics.

"Accomplishing more with less tests marketers across the board," said owner Stephen

Crawley. "Over the years, many smaller businesses and non-profits have asked us to play an expanded role, telling us that a single source for planning, creative and production services would be valuable to them."

In addition to marketing consultation, copywriting and graphic design services, Allegra features advanced printing technologies.
