Beijing's Hidden Treasures

If you could only use one word to describe China it would have to be epic. It's an epic country where it's important to be bold and discover personal favourites amid the interplay of temples, tea shops and tuk tuks. The Sites. Beijing's must-dos are obvious, and any comprehensive tour will make sure you see them all. What's important is to take time to look past the postcards and find moments of quiet reflection in the beautiful tree-lined paths of the Temple of Heaven. The Shopping. Take time to explore

China's back alley shops and be prepared to haggle. Don't be surprised if you find yourself in possession of a Mao t-shirt and a year's supply of oolong tea. The Food. Be adventurous with your food choices. Most tours ensure that you round up the usual favourites like a killer plate of Kung Pow chicken, but don't be afraid to seek out street food (like some sesame wontons from the city's Muslim quarter)
