

Home Elements showroom a great place for gifts

Home Elements and Addison Custom Iron at 86 Ringwood Dr., Unit 29, features a fascinating variety of unique furniture and accessories for the home.

From hand-crafted pine iron furniture, exotic wall masks and Christmas decorations, to pillows, candlesticks and elegant long-stemmed red wine glasses, this delightful showroom offers an excellent selection of Christmas gift items for everyone on your list. Home Elements owner Kelly Baxter, who designed and decorated the interior herself, said the response from customers has been excellent and invites everyone to drop in and browse.

Our own Loretta

Addison, whose son, John, owns Addison Custom Iron, greets visitors with a friendly smile and is always happy to accept letters or information for Stouffville This Month. Extra copies of the paper are also available at the store, which is located just a few doors down from Peach Tree Originals.

Kelly Baxter enjoys a brief moment of relaxation between meeting and greeting the large crowd who attended the opening of her new showroom, Home Elements and Addison Custom Iron on Ringwood Dr.

We are not amused!

On November's front page we made a royal gaffe by referring to Queen Elizabeth II as Her Royal Highness. One of our readers kindly called to point out that the Queen should always be referred to as Her Majesty. We stand corrected.

A Bach to Blues Christmas

On Sunday, Dec. 15 at 7:30 p.m., Bach to Blues presents its fourth annual Christmas concert at Christ Church Anglican.

As always, the repertoire will be eclectic, original and beautifully performed. Guest artists are Hickory Roots, featuring Gary Burke, Susan Luk and Wanda Stride; flautist Laura Probst, sopranos Jocelyn McDowell and Lauren Christoff, tenor David Cardinal and trumpeter Tim Birch.

The Bach to Blues Company, which draws its members from Stouffville and surrounding areas, performs a wide-ranging variety of works from the 16th to the 20th century and welcomes new members at all levels of vocal expertise. For more information visit the website at www.bachtoblues.com.
