

THE SHOPS AROUND RINGWOOD DRIVE

"A Unique Assortment of Shops & Services for you to Discover"

Common Law Is NOT A Spouse

In practice since 1977 I have found common law to be the single most misunderstood area of Ontario Law. It comes up often in my real estate practice involving the purchase, sale and financing of properties both residential and cottage. It comes up most in connection with doing wills and Powers of Attorney and the administering of estates.

Spouses have rights to real estate. Spouses have rights to inherit. Spouses have some rights in Powers of Attorney. People living in a common law relationship, even for 50 years with or without children, have no more rights to these than your next door neighbour.

The law is very complex. Common laws do have some rights. But not in the areas that I mentioned. Consult a lawyer. With the proper documentation you can get all of the rights that you thought you had.
