Exhibition Celebrates Canadian Icon

By Maura Broadhurst

On July 24 the Latcham Gallery opened a special exhibition of work by Doris McCarthy, a renowned Canadian painter who turned 100 on July 7.

Throughout her long life, she has achieved remarkable milestones, travelled throughout Canada, created thousands of paintings, inspired countless people, and written four autobiographies.

To list this notable Canadian's many achievements would be impossible. She is a member of the Order of Canada and the Order of Ontario. She is the recipient of five honorary doctorates and was named artist of honour at the McMichael Canadian Art Collection. She also has a public art gallery named after her at the Scarborough campus of the University of Toronto.

As impressive as these honours are, the Latcham Gallery exhibition really celebrates her life as an artist. During the 70 plus years that she painted, McCarthy tackled diverse subject matter in many different styles and media.

As a highly motivated teacher, she felt it was vital that she be able to do in practice what she was teaching in theory. She is best known as a Canadian landscape painter, and perhaps gained her greatest initial fame after her trip to the Arctic in 1972 and the subsequent exhibition of her iceberg paintings.

In all of McCarthy's works her skilled hand is evident in her use of shape and colour and masterful composition, but viewers will also feel her passion for this country's landscapes. This exhibition provides a glimpse into the many styles and sites she has captured during her long career. The paintings are from private collections and include works from 1982 to 2005. They depict scenes from Ontario, Quebec and the west and east coasts, along with several pieces from the Arctic.

Also on display are many books by and about McCarthy, as well as the film Heart of a Painter in which the artist speaks about her work and her process. We hope that everybody will take advantage of this rare opportunity to see these paintings and to celebrate this Canadian icon. The exhibition continues until Sept. 11.

WINNING WOLVERINES

Stouffville's Griffin Stapley quarterbacked his Wolverines team to a perfect 8-0 record in the recently completed Markham Raiders Atom Football House League regular schedule. Griffin, who earned his team's best offensive player medallion in his second Raiders season, honed his skills under the expert leadership of Wolverines head coach Bill Chadderton, a former Canadian Football League player with the Ottawa Roughriders. The Raiders welcome players from Stouffville and surrounding area.
