

Here's To The Next 30 Years

By Maura Broadhurst

PreView, the Latcham Gallery's current exhibition and celebration of the gallery's 30th anniversary, features works by Katie Bethune-Leamen, Andrea Carvalho, Daniel Colby, Jacquelin Heichert, Robert Hengeveld and Tania Love.

Bethune-Leamen explores issues of camouflage, reproducing the artwork from the musical group OMD's 1983 album cover Dazzle Ships. Carvalho has constructed a shelter made out of cardboard and packing tape, reflecting issues of homelessness and the need for shelter. Daniel Colby presents five paintings that explore gender, age identity and human relationships.

PreView also introduces Stouffville artist Jacquelin Heichert, who uses relief printing to create images she calls Everyday Landscapes, representing the repetitive nature of daily activities. A new tree outside the gallery, created by Robert Hengeveld, rotates slowly, drawing attention to our relationship with nature. Tania Love also considers our natural environment through delicate works on paper using natural dyes that she transforms into paper sculptures.

Musicians are invited to visit the gallery throughout the exhibition and create a piece inspired by a specific artwork or the show in general. On Oct. 24, the gallery will host its popular event, What does a work of art sound like? when the musicians will return and perform their compositions. Everyone is invited to attend the event, as we consider the visual arts from the perspective of musical interpretation.

Come and celebrate our history in October and join us as we embark on our next 30 years!

A Fond Farewell To Summer

Her Uncle Mike taught Erica Feld, 6, how to water-ski on Labour Day weekend at Musselman's Lake. Erica's cousin, Hailey Wigmore, and friend Alexis Jenkin also learned to ski.
