A Campaign Secret Given Away.

In the campaign of 1881 the two candidates for governor in a "pivotal" Western State argued for a series of joint discussions. Both men were popular, both of fine appearance and were so well matched in mental force and as orators that the contest between them promised to be a magnificence at once. For several weeks the scenes were indeed eventful.

But one day the brilliant Republican candidate came up missing. He seemed overcome and spoke laboriously. The next day he was even less effective. Later he was compelled to ask his opponent for a postponement of certain pointments, which was granted. Before the campaign ended he had abandoned the field altogether.

Meantime the Democratic candidate continued his canvass, seeming to grow stronger, cheerier, and more effective with each succeeding week. He was elected. One evening in December while entertaining several gentlemen he said:

"I will tell you a campaign secret—which gave me the election. With the opening of my campaign I began caring for my liver. I knew that a disordered or torpid liver meant dullness and possible sickness. I took something every day. When my opponent began failing I knew his trouble to be his liver and felt like prescribing for him, but feared if I did so he might beat me! I grew stronger as the campaign progressed, often making two speeches a day. Even my voice, to my surprise, did not fail me once. All because Warner's safe cure kept me in A 1 trim." Ex-Governor Jacob of Kentucky, also made a campaign tour under precisely similar circumstances and says he kept up under the exhausting strain by use of the same means.—Rochester Union.

A country fellow who lived having bought some pigs, asked a neighbor for the use of a pen for a few days. Said he: "I have just been purchased in thome twine—two throwt and pith. I want to put them in your pen till I can get a place for them."

"Two thousand pigs!" exclaimed the neighbor; "why, my pen will hardly hold a dozen."

You don't understand me, Mr. Bent. I don't thay two thousand piths, but two throwt and pith."

"I hear you," said Mr. Bent. "Two thousand pigs. Why you must be

I tell you again," exclaimed the man, angrily. "I mean not two thousand piths, but two throwt and two pith."

"Oh, that is what you mean, eh? Well, the pen is at your service."

A Titusville paper says: "A man at one of our shoe stores yesterday and vainly essayed to get on either numbers, 11, 12, or 13—shoes. The store-keeper then suggested that he should put on a thinner pair of stockings and try on the box."

KNOWN BY THESE SIGNS. Dyspepsia may be known by Heartburn, Sour Eructations, Wind Belching, Weight at the stomach, Vomiting appetite, Constipation, Stomach Bloating, Gas, &c. It is a common Disease throughout the world, although in its worst chronic form.

The Old Story. Not infrequently do we hear tell of an unsuspecting and simple individual being caught by sharpers and blacklegs in some manner or other, and his little all taken from him before he is aware of it. The means adopted by these travelling sharpers for making money varies in many respects from the ordinary pursuits of an honest man, inasmuch as they do not earn bread by the sweat of their brow, but get it by making others earn it for them. A young man was at one time travelling on a railway train and in the course of his trip made the acquaintance of two well dressed men who, after some minutes conversation, changed the subject, and one of them drew out a set of cards from an inside pocket. The stranger was invited to play, only for pastime, of course. Well, he played to pass away time, but before he got through he managed to pass away more than that, for he passed over the money in his possession, and at the next station the "men of the pasteboards" passed out to secure another victim elsewhere. The green youth has fallen only too readily in a trap, and got badly duped. He was victim of misplaced confidence, for he believed all would be right in the end. A man must be cautious about everything—especially when he is purchasing a suit of clothes. A good article is essential at all times. Go to Campbell & Walker's Court's Furnishing house, Uxbridge, and you won't get caught."

How Uses for Old Shoes.

It is to be a surprise to some people that the old shoes cast into the ash bin are liable to reappear in the bond and parlor. An inquisitive reporter followed a couple of ragpickers quarreling over a lot of worn out and seemingly worthless footgear interviewed the chaffiniers and found that they sold them to the manufacturers of wallpaper. He followed up the clue, questing on the foreman of one establishment, elicited the following:

"W. boots," said the foreman, "all the old shoes that the scavengers can bring." We pay different prices for different qualities of leather. A fine calfskin will bring as high as fifty cents. We don't buy cowhide. The boots and shoes are first soaked in several waters to get the dirt off. Then the nail and threads are removed, the leather is ground up to a pulp and is ready to us."

The caloused leather paperings have lately come into fashion, stamped leather fire screens, are nothing but thick paper covered by a layer of this pressed leather pulp. The quality of the leather the takes the bronze and old gold expensive colors in the depicted upon them. Fashionable think they are going away back evan times when they have the their libraries and dining rooms covered with embossed leather. They now that the boots and shoes of neighbors threw into the a smooth before would furnish material on their walls and screens which protect their eyes from fire.

We could buy the old shoes cheap—if we were not for the competition carriage makers and bookbinders and picture frame makers. I don't know how many other trades use old boots and shoes, but the tops of carriages are largely made of them, ground up and dressed into sheets; bookbinders use them in making the cheaper forms of leather bindings, and the new styles of leather frames with leather mats in them are entirely made of the cast off covering of our feet."

Trades for American Boys.

The trades in our country, of late years, have been almost monopolized by foreigners. The American boy, however, when he does take a trade, goes straight to the top of the ladder. It seems as if our boys would rather be fourth-rate lawyers or physicians, than earn their living by working with their hands. Only the other day I read in a New York newspaper of a young lawyer in a distant city, whom I knew some years ago when I resided in that section of the country, who literally starved to death. He made scarcely any money, was too proud to tell of his want, lived as long as he could on crackers and water, and was found in his office dead—from lack of nourishment. He should never have entered the legal profession for he had no ability in that direction. As a farmer or a mechanic he might have lived a long, full, and successful life.

No boy, of course, should enter a trade unless he feels himself fitted for it; but, on the other hand, he should not, it seems to me, let the false pride against manual labor which now prevails to such a wide extent in our country, prevent him from endeavoring to do better work with his hands than in his inmost thoughts he knows that he can do with his head.

Quadruple Force. The reason why disease is so soon expelled from the system is that the body is in a healthy condition, say, upon the bones, the lungs, the kidneys, drying out all bad humor and regulating every organic function.

Mr. Smith is bound to have his joke. His wife walked nearly in front of a tailor the other day, and he said if she had gone a step farther his children would have had a step-mother.

Just the Thing. A user SCENE—"Now, Willie, have a little courage. When I have to take I don't like it any more than you do; but I make up my mind to take it, and I do." "And when I have a powder to take," replied Willie, "I make up my mind that I won't take it, and I don't."
