THE IDEAL SON.

Sabbath evening last a good congregation greeted Mrs. Aikenhead when she continued her course of sermons on "Social Ideals" taking for her subject the "Ideal Son." The sermon was so full of practical thought that by request a synopsis of the leading points are given for the benefit of our readers.

The speaker began by asking "Can the average young man be classed as an 'Ideal Son.'" Many said the manhood to-day was not equal to the manhood of the past. She was not pessimistic. The world was growing better. Instances were quoted to prove the whole tendency was upward. If the young men did not reach up to our ideals perhaps they were not altogether to blame. They were largely what their homes made them. The mad rush for wealth on the part of the fathers and the all-absorbing ambition on the part of the mother to win social distinction weakened their interest in the home.

Homes were the bulwark of society, the foundations of national greatness. No nation could rise above its homes, and none could utterly fail that held sacred the home. Instances were cited in support of this argument. No danger that menaced America to-day was so great as the loss of her christian homes. If she lose these, "Ichabod" could be written over her as a nation.

The future greatness of Canada depended not upon whether Conservative or Liberal government was in power or even upon securing prohibition, so much, as it depended upon godly homes sending out pure thinking, noble living men and women to sustain the standard of our national greatness. The Roman cry, "To your hearths and to your altars" needed to be sounded from Pacific to Atlantic and from the frozen north to the sunny south.

The history of nations had been "struggle and strength, strength and conquest, conquest and wealth, wealth and luxury, luxury and dissipation, dissipation and decay. A nation was but the aggregation of individuals and what was true of the nation was true of the individual. It was not always a blessing to be born with a silver spoon in one's mouth, Great Canadian and American legislators and financiers were quoted to show that from the humble walks men had risen to the highest positions. Poverty was no drawback if boys possessed industry and determination.

A few of the characteristics of an "Ideal Son"—were reverence for religion, for the Sabbath, the Church, the parent, industry and diligence, Godliness. The 20th century young man was not characterized by reverence for anything.

Irreverence towards religion had its foundation in the home if parents were too much engrossed in worldly things to recognize the claims of religion. They could not expect the boy to grow up respecting it. The father who prays at prayer meeting but had no time for family prayer in the home need not expect his son to reverence religion. Young men were urged to reverence the Sabbath and keep it holy, the house of God, where from the choir to the last pew there should be solemnity and profound respect during divine service.

A young man who did not respect his parents lacked moral fibre. Neither God nor man could make much of a boy of this stamp. A President of France and one of the ablest sovereigns were quoted as instances of parental respect. Don't forget your parents when away. Write weekly. Never forget the loving care they bestowed upon you during the years when you could not care for yourself. Don't neglect them if they are poor. Don't sponge upon them. You should be industrious. Calvin has said "Genius is an indolent capacity for taking trouble." We might not all be brilliant but we could all be genious. The Ideal Son would be godly. Godliness was profitable for all things having the promise of the life that now is and of that which is to come. Men overlooked the promises of God made to those who lived uprightly. Many promises were quoted. The Ideal Son would not be found on the street corner with a cigar in his mouth, nor lounging among dissolute companions, nor a familiar frequenter of bar rooms. Fond of sport he might be, but the claims of duty would come first. Kindly in the home, respectful to parents, considerate and kind with younger members of the family, loving with his sisters.

The speaker closed by saying there came a time in the life of most when they took their destinies into their own hands. Some perhaps prodigal, had done this and their money, without home, without character, without friends, yet the father came to meet him and restored him to his lost position. God could take the wasted life and reconstruct it and make it noble, and she urged all present that they might make the most out of this life and be prepared for life to come, to take Christ as their example and their Saviour.

RINGWOOD.

The death of Mrs. McPherson who was until eleven years ago a resident of Ringwood, took place at the home of her daughter Mrs. McFarlen at Brantford on Thursday, Feb. 2nd. The corpse was brought to the home of her son John on Saturday evening and the funeral took place from there on Sunday afternoon. The funeral sermon was preached at Melville by Rev. Mr. Barbour of Stouffville, assisted by Rev. B. A. G. Willoughby. The following friends from a distance attended the funeral: (Mr. and Mrs. McFarlen of Brantford, Miss Maggie McPherson of Chicago, Mrs. Tena McPherson of Brantford and Mr. Archibald McPherson of Woodstock. The following were the pall bearers: Messrs. J. T. Breuls, W. Mitchell, C. Stouffer, A. Mitchell, W. Breuls and N. Greaves. Mrs. McPherson was well known and highly esteemed in Ringwood. During her residence here she was an active member in the Melville Presbyterian church and her christian character was beyond reproach. The friends of the deceased have the sympathy of the entire neighborhood.

Mr. H. Spang spent a few days in Toronto last week on business (?)

Mr. Allen Pipher of our town was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Wilson of Markham on Monday, of last week. The boys of our town very kindly serenaded them on Tuesday evening. On consideration of the grand music which pealed forth from the tin pans, cow bells, moul boards and fish horns the happy bridegroom gave them a substantial recompense. We understand the young couple will reside in Ringwood in the house recently occupied by Mr. Ayres.

There was no service in the Christian church last Sunday on account of the funeral of the late Mrs. McPherson.

A young man took his girl driving one day last week. He had the lines. We wonder if he was doing in the moment that the weather was cold. She had warm gloves on her hands. We leave you to guess the rest.

Miss Maggie McPherson of Chicago is the guest of her brother John.

Weddings seem to be all the go around here. On Wednesday, Feb. 1st Miss P. Winsor, daughter of Mr. R. Winsor, was united in marriage to Mr. J. Cameron of Toronto. The happy pair are spending their honeymoon at the home of the bride. In accordance with custom, the Ringwood tin pan and cow bell band serenaded the young couple and received a good recompense which was placed in the treasury of the band for new music books.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Pipher were in Toronto on Saturday last.

German Paternalism.
American tourists returning from Europe bring back stories of the paternal watch which is kept upon them in Germany. One woman was requested by a policeman to hold up her gown which was a trailing, elaborate affair of lace and chiffon. It was after dinner, and she was taking a stroll with her husband through a park whose immaculate walks seemed to offer no harm to its delicacy, so she let it hang. The policeman was polite enough. He informed her gravely that any dress that was allowed to trail was liable to collect undesirable matter and prove injurious to health, and he reminded her that one time a law was under consideration to make the wearing of such a dress a misdemeanor.
