JOHN BULL NO LONGER PULLS THE CHESTNUTS OUT OF THE FIRE.

To Protect His Interests and Care for His People Everywhere is What He is Now Doing-He is No Longer the Cat's Paw for Scheming Nations.

"John Rusk" has the following interesting communication in the Chicago Post:-This is a song long sung. It is more intense at present, lighter in key and reaching far. It is on a par with the idea and in time with the chord promulgated and played upon for twenty-five yearsthat England is a decaying power.

Why mention twenty-five years? Because in that time those great armies have risen in Europe which have putsome nations in the front, which stay there by force of arms. It is argued that England in consequence of these changes is a bit of mud lying off the coast of Europe and living wholly by the sufferance of continental governments. But they prove too much, and the earnestness and force of argument used to show that Great Britain is dead is
