There is nothing in the present day agitating the minds of farmers more than tencing. And you will often hear the question article. How are we going to fence our farms? It is aimost impossible to get rails and posts; and after we get them and put up the feare it is beaving out with frost, or rotting off and is not satisfactory. To meet this need we have lately invented a portable ferms or status. ary if so desired. And we have no hesitation in presenting it before the public believing that warn it is considered at will receive the public patronage it deserves.
