The Indian Covernment is considering FARMER - GOODHALL-At the residence of means for encouraging the cultivation of wheat. Experters declare that transportstion is the only difficulty in the way of making India yield sufficient wheat to cover the total requirements of Great Britain. The exports of wheat from India is on the increase every year at an enormous rate. The Hindoo method of cultivation is primitived the people are averse to changes. Laborers who work in the fields receive $2 a month. The Indian wheat is of poor quality, and before being used in Great Britain is invariably mixed with American and British wheat, thereby making a very marketable flour.
