one of the capitals of Morocco, he found a most unlooked-for custom among the women. Mohammedans are not supposed to drink spirituous liquors, but Dr. Lenze says the women in Morocco are universally addicted to the practice. The Jews make a brandy for which their customers are almost exclusively Moorish women. While the men are strict prohibitionists, the women drink brandy in large quantities. Women who came to Dr. Lenz's house to see his Moorish servants never failed to ask him for a glass of wine or coguac, and he was surprised to see the quantities they could drink. The importers of and traders in articles of fashion at St. Petersburg, also the fashionable milliners and dress makers, have an exceptionally hard time this winter. Their business is bad because, as was reported, at the expressed desire of the Czar no balls are to be given at the court this season, and following the example of the imperial court, the highest circles of aristocracy refrain from giving balls and holding fashionable receptions. Several large houses have failed and many more are expected to follow suit. Thousands of millinery hands and dressmakers were thrown out of employment. Up to Nov. 1 the Russian imperial treas-
