Lights out for Earth Hour

In one year, the world consumes approximately 15 terawatts of energy — enough to power 150 billion light bulbs.

That's an enormous amount of energy and although Whitchurch-Stouffville only consumes a fraction of that amount, the town joins countless towns and cities across the world in Earth Hour 2016 to power down for one hour this Saturday, March 19 from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m.

During that hour, the municipality will reduce its electricity consumption by turning off most lights at municipal offices and facilities. Lights needed for essential programs and public safety will remain lit.

Earth Hour is a worldwide grassroots movement and an annual event supported by the World Wildlife Fund. Its purpose is to raise awareness about energy conservation and climate change.

The town encourages residents and businesses to participate in the initiative by powering down on Saturday night on the designated hour.

It's not just Earth Hour that can reduce a heavy carbon footprint, but also taking transit, unplugging unused electrical appliances and washing clothes in cold water.

So, for at least an hour, turn off those computer screens, put down the smartphones and go for a walk, have a chat or play a game with friends and family, the town urges.
