TOWN COUNCIL

Library/leisure centre expansion on schedule

BY ALI RAZA

The town's biggest project of the year is right on schedule.

Whitchurch-Stouffville town council approved a motion to hire Diamond Schmitt Architects as a primary consultant for the Leisure Centre and Public Library expansion at council meeting last week.

Currently, the project stands as a collaboration between Diamond Schmitt Architects, the town and the steering committee.

The total cost of the project stands at $15 million, tax included. Diamond Schmitt was hired for the project at $947,150. The facility is located at Park and Hoover Park drives in Stouffville Memorial Park.

At the council meeting, councillors Ken Ferdinands and Maurice Smith expressed concern that the project would be delayed, given the scale and size.

"It seems like an unbelievable task to have the steering committee, the architect and construction manager all work together," Ferdinands said.

"I don't want to see it fall behind," Smith said. "I hope you and staff are cognisant of the dates."

I don't want to see it fall behind. I hope you and staff are cognisant of the dates.'

But director of leisure and community services Rob Raycroft assured that construction, which is scheduled to begin this fall, would be completed by the anticipated date of September or October 2017.
