Appliances cause Main St. shed fire

Don't leave your electrical appliances plugged in if you're not using them, Stouffville.

It caused a fire in the shed of a Main Street house that caused a temporary road closure and covered the neighbourhood with a strong, smoky smell Monday.

The homeowner's son told The Sun-Tribune that around 1:30 p.m. his mother noticed smoke rising from their back yard shed. That's when she called 911 and within minutes three fire trucks were at the scene, just east of Summitview Public School.

Damage was estimated at $5,000, said Stouffville fire prevention and public education officer Jennifer Cooper.

The homeowner had left "a number of things" plugged in via an extension cord, including a grinder and a battery charger for a cordless drill, she said. Cooper said it was difficult to establish whether the fire was caused by an appliance or because of a shorted outlet.

"We want to remind residents not to use extension cords on a permanent basis," she said.

Firefighters subdued the fire, leaving a burnt, cracked and soaked shed with most of its stored items charred and black. They continued to "overhaul" the sides of the shed to find any smouldering material that may have remained.

Smoke could be seen from downtown.

Cooper reminds residents to replace smoke alarms every 10 years, as they have a lifespan. Smoke alarms are checked by firefighters regardless of the location of a fire — even in sheds or garages.
