

Alzheimer's film being shot downtown

It will be lights, cameras and some action on Main Street, as Filmcoop Inc. will be filming a short film on Tuesday. Exterior scenes from Piano Lessons will be shot alongside roads and shops. Residents and business owners on Main Street were notified with a letter from location manager Julianna Notten this week. It's an educational film, exploring the experience of Alzheimer's disease and will be used primarily by doctors, caregivers and people with dementia to improve public understanding of the disease and the cognitive impairments that affect patients. The scene involves an older woman and her granddaughter looking into store windows. Filming will take just a few hours. The film is a project of Trent University's Centre for Aging and Society and is directed by project partner Mark Skinner. It's endorsed by the Alzheimer's Society of Toronto and is planned to premiere at Baycrest Hospital in Toronto, noted for its work on patients with dementia. The filming crew received a permit.
