Town CAO on leave since April

There is “no new update” regarding town CAO Marc Pourvahidi’s leave of absence, which now enters its sixth month.

Town corporate communications specialist Glenn Jackson confirmed that all remained the same at town hall. Leisure services director Rob Raycroft still remains acting CAO.

Pourvahidi went on sick leave in late April after it was revealed that the town had a large exodus of 30 employees since Jan. 1, 2015.

That sick leave eventually became an administrative leave, the town announced in May. The duration of leave was written as “unknown” and the cause was a “personnel matter” in the original media release.

Raycroft has served as acting CAO since he replaced fire chief Rob McKenzie for the position on May 10. McKenzie held the CAO position for two weeks.

Pourvahidi was the town’s former director of finance and was hired as CAO on May 5, 2015 after serving as acting CAO since March 2015. It was then in March when former CAO Andrew McNeely was placed on administrative leave, eventually resigning on April 21, 2015.

McNeely took the job from Dave Cash, who had been CAO since 2006. Cash unexpectedly retired in 2013.

The town recently announced new hires for the positions of economic development officer (David Tuley), downtown co-ordinator (Tina Sharma), revenue and taxation services manager (Tracy Parsons) and development services director (Mary Hall).
