The fall lineup for the Lebovic Centre for Arts & Entertainment (19 on the Park) features Canadian musicians known coast to coast, as well as some local performers celebrating the season.

Canadian folk singer and songwriter Dave Gunning is set to spark Stouffville's fall entertainment options with his concert this Saturday, Sept. 24. Tickets are $19 and the concert starts at 8 p.m.

'It's such an intimate venue and it's close to home.'

Hailing from Pictou County, Nova Scotia, Gunning has a 20-year recording career, with his debut album Lost Tracks first released in 1996. His latest album, Lift, was released in 2015.

Gunning's music career has yielded him eight East Coast Music Awards, two Canadian Folk Music Awards, and a 2012 Juno Award nomination.

It's the Beginner's Guide to Blues on Oct. 22 at 8 p.m. Performers Chuck & Johnny offer residents an evening of blues and music stemming from their experience in the Canadian blues community.

tale Dracula on Oct. 30 at 8 p.m.

For November, local musician Dave Lawlor will perform a concert in support of York Region Victim Services. The evening will have a reception with wine and hors d'oeuvres at 6:30 p.m. followed by the concert at 8 p.m. Tickets are $100 plus tax.

Ending the season before Christmas events is Canadian vocal group DALA.

"We are very excited to be returning to 19 on the Park," said group members Amanda Walther and Sheila Carabine in an email to The Sun-Tribune. "It's such an intimate venue and it's close to home. This will be our third show in Stouffville."

The group was nominated for a 2011 Juno Award and won the 2010 Canadian Folk Music Award for Vocal Group of the Year. Walther and Carabine met in high school music class in 2002 and since have released five albums and toured across North America. The group is originally from Scarborough.

The duo offers Stouffville acoustic pop performances. Tickets are $39, tax included.
