Paul Calandra has been nominated by the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario as the Markham-Stouffville candidate for the 2018 provincial election.

Ontario PC leader Patrick Brown made the announcement on Nov. 11.

"Having served seven years as a Member of Parliament, Paul's experience will allow him to continue to serve the people of Markham-Stouffville well," Brown said in a statement. "I would also like to thank Farid Wassef and John Himanen for running strong campaigns and for their contribution to the Ontario PC cause."

Calandra announced his run for the nomination in September; Wassef and Himanen announced shortly afterward. A nomination meeting was slated for May/June 2017, but the party has nominated Calandra earlier.

In the statement announcing the nomination, Calandra said the Liberal government under Kathleen Wynne is the reason why he decided to run.

"The Kathleen Wynne Liberals have made life harder for the people of Ontario and I could no longer sit idly by," Calandra said.

"That's why I'm running to be Markham-Stouffville's next MPP. I hope to bring my experience and passion to the table, serving as a strong voice for his city and community at Queen's Park," he added.

The 42nd Ontario general election will take place June 7, 2018.
