BEWARE! BANK POWER OF ATTORNEY

Age or illness is increasingly causing many to have to rely on someone else to conduct their financial affairs.

This is where you need a Power of Attorney. Mostly this is for banking.

I recently had a man selling the family home but his wife's illness meant that he had to use a Power of Attorney for her. The only one he had was from the Bank. It very clearly said that it was for Bank business only.

Fortunately the Lawyer had time to go to Court and get a Court Order giving him the Power to sell the house.

A proper Power of Attorney from a lawyer is more certain and is less costly than a Court Order. Yes, I know that Banks give you a hassle when you want to use a proper Power of Attorney rather than their own form; however, they have to accept a Power of Attorney prepared by a Lawyer. Compare that to the hassle and cost of a Court Order.

Get proper advice. Banks do not have that expertise.
