Steve Leary of Brantford, Sergeant Jason Boyes of Napanee and 155 other brave soldiers made their final trip home on the Highway of Heroes. Canadians stood vigilant and tall as the fallen soldiers passed by in a procession that was heart wrenching to watch.

Tragically, more have died from suicide since returning from Afghanistan than actually died in battle. The horrors they brought home with them were as real as the war itself and more than they could bear.

For every loss of life, in every war, a string of lives have been forever changed. You may not know the names of those who fought, but you have to recognize their ultimate sacrifice.

Today more than 80 Canadian Armed Forces personnel have been deployed to Iraq as part of Operation Impact. As wreaths are placed this November 11, pay tribute to these brave Canadians.

Think about the Unknown Soldier, and remember all those who headed off into terrors of the unknown so that we could live in freedom.

They did not die in vain. We will remember.
