For years we have heard that
Poinsettias are poisonous.
But are they really????

Doctors and Veterinarians cautioned us to keep the beautiful plants out of childrens and pets reach for fear they might nibble on the leaves which were believed to be toxic. The long standing belief that Poinsettias were poisonous has been proven to be nothing more than a myth. According to the Madison Poison Control centre a 50 lb. child would need to ingest 500-600 Poinsettia leaves to have any effects...result an upset stomach. Children's hospital of Pittsburgh conducted a study of almost 23,000 poinsettias and found none to be toxic. The greatest threat the plants pose is the potential to obstruct the child's or pet's airway causing choking which is true to any plant you would have in your home.

So this holiday season sit back and enjoy your beautiful Poinsettia with no worries at all.
