

Goodwood Gardens will host annual Fall Festival

On Sept. 14, Goodwood Gardens hosts its fourth annual Fall Festival with a scarecrow-making workshop for the family, food booth, free seminar, contests and prizes.

Fall Festival is an opportunity to support fundraising activities in the community. The Residents' Council at Versa Care Centre in Uxbridge is selling a tasty lunch including beef on a bun, assorted home-baked goods and hot and cold beverages, starting at 11:30 a.m.

At noon and 2 p.m., Vicki Taylor-Scott hosts scarecrow-making workshops for the whole family. A complete construction kit for a child-size scarecrow is available for a three dollar donation to the Children's Wish Foundation. All you need to bring is an assortment of old children's clothing and any other decorative materials you wish to create your own scarecrow to take home. Please call Goodwood Gardens to register in advance.

International plant collector, author and horticulturist John Valleau from Heritage Perennials presents a free seminar on ornamental grasses at 2 p.m. Enter the plant identification contests for adults and children and win gift certificates and prizes.

Fall Festival is a rain or shine event. Come to Goodwood Gardens and enjoy fall in the garden.

For more information or to register for the scarecrow making workshop call 905-640-4852.

Moonlight blackout

Suze Joyce of Healing Force Health Food Store, and husband Doug, prepare to meet and greet visitors at the BIA's Moonlight and Madness Aug. 14. Unfortunately, the power outage meant that most retailers had to shut up shop and many would-be visitors were stranded in the city. The BIA has rescheduled the event for Aug. 28.
