Many Remember Him. The reference to "Penny, The Pie Man," in the Whig of Monday, brought back recollections of old days to many citizens. One aged gentleman says he distinctly remembers the pie man, and states that his name was Wilkinson. While engaged in cutting boneless turkey at the City hotel he slashed his finger with the knife Blood-poisoning developed, and resulted in his death. Many an aged citizen who read the article recalls the time when he patronized this peerless pie-maker.
