MR. REDMOND'S SPEECH IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Rebellion a Question of Expediency, Resistance a Duty-Compulsory Sale of Land Demanded-Coercion Act Ruthlessly

London, Jan. 23.-In the house commons to-day John Redmond raised the question or Irish grievances. He declared that instead of remedying the admitted wrongs, the government had fallen back on the old methods of coercion. 'The Irish people would yet teach Mr. Wyndham, the chief secretary for Ireland, to repent his rash refusal to grant the reasonable demands of Ireland in regard to the compusory sale and purchase of land. There was European ports since the season opened: no country in the world where crime the coercion act had been resurrected after a decade, and had been ruthlessly applied to scores, including members of the house of commons, who had been unjustifiably imprisoned, and trial by jury had been abolished. The Guest, Keen & Co., and the Nettleford Co's, whole intellect of Ireland was against the government, and in such circumstances resistance to the government was a duty, and rebellion became merely a question ob expediency,

Made The Streets Worse.

Corporation laborers were to-day en gaged in digging ditches along the edges of the streets. The snow and ice removed, instead of being carted away, was thrown into the street, making a fearfully uneven road bed. Some portions of King and Princess street were thus rendered almost impassable. A number of the merchants, at their own expense, had load after load of ice and snow hauled away. This was work the city should have done.
